We Are Proud of Our Diverse Communities

Serving South Central Los Angeles since 1974, SCLARC gives assistance to its consumers and their families within a service area that includes the cities of Paramount, Cudahy, Downey, Bell Gardens, Huntington Park, South Gate, Compton and Carson, as well as the Los Angeles communities of Watts, the Crenshaw District, Leimert Park, View Park and Baldwin Hills. South Central Los Angeles Regional Center is one of 21 Regional Centers in the State of California providing services to persons with developmental disabilities. Our mission is to provide assessment, information and referrals, advocacy, prevention services and coordination of case management services to people who are developmentally disabled (consumers) as well as to those who are at risk for a developmental disability. SCLARC is committed to the provision of culturally and ethnically sensitive services which enhance the inherent strengths of the family and enable consumers to lead more independent and productive lives in community integrated settings.
Speaker Fabian Núñez (D-46th District) is no stranger to serving the needs of the people. He was elected to the California State Assembly in 2002 and sworn in as the State’s 66th Speaker on February 9, 2004. In 2005, he was an integral part of establishing the Legislative Blue Ribbon Commission on Autism. The resolution creating it received strong bipartisan support and its goal is to have direct impact on the needs of children and adults with autism spectrum disorders.

Authored by Senate President Pro Tem Don Perata (D-Oakland) and supported by Assembly Speaker Fabian Núñez (D-Los Angeles), the resolution (SCR 51), created a sixteen-member Commission representing parents of children with autism, the public and private sector, educators, physicians, and public health officials. The Commission established the following three Task Forces: Early Identification & Intervention; Education & Professional Development; and Transitional Services & Supports. These workgroups were charged with the role of assisting the Commission in fulfilling the legislative mandate that “the Commission shall identify gaps in programs, services, and funding related to the early identification of autism spectrum disorders and provide recommendations to close the identified gaps.”

Between November 2006 and February 2007, the three groups focused on the identification of major problems and gaps in services to children and families, particularly those that are amenable to state policy intervention. The Commission established a strategic plan that is focused on a “strength-based approach” that will improve services and supports for individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorder, and their families, by integrating validated best-practices with family-focused, community-based providers and systems of care. Members of the three Task Force groups have worked extensively and their preliminary findings and recommendations were presented to the Commission. You can view the findings at http://senweb03.senate.ca.gov/autism. Regional meetings are being held to obtain public input from families, advocates, community organizations and other stakeholders.
ACTION HEROES!

In Los Angeles, the names Areva Martin and Donna Ross Jones are synonymous with action. The two mothers co-founded Special Needs Network, Inc., a non-profit organization in order to change public policy while changing lives. Besides offering skills, support, and education to families with special needs children, SNN engages policy-makers in Sacramento, school district headquarters and city halls in meaningful dialogue in order to make them aware of the need for equal services and adequate personnel for the African American community which has been woefully neglected until now.

YOU WOULD BE A-MAZED

Martin and Jones came together four years ago after their sons were diagnosed with autism. Both were astounded by how difficult it was to find help for their children. Their communities lacked knowledge of the disorder, and there was a void of centralized information, affordable medical support, treatment and services for children with autism. After years of successfully working their way through the bureaucratic “maze,” they decided to pool their resources and expertise to assist families who have children with developmental disabilities.

ON A MISSION

SNN’s mission is to raise public awareness of developmental disabilities and impact public policy, while providing education and resources to families, children and adults. SNN serves as a link between underserved communities – particularly African Americans and mainstream developmental disability organizations and governmental institutions, which often fail to address issues specific to these communities.

BLUE RIBBON COMMITMENT

SNN is only one reason California Speaker of the Assembly Fabian Núñez(D-Los Angeles) has named Areva as the only African American woman on his Blue Ribbon Commission on Autism (see page 3). Her legal practice embraces hundreds of families who are in need of special education and regional center services, but could not access them by themselves. She is also a sought-after speaker for governmental agencies and medical/para-medical professionals who deal with the special needs community.

TOOLS FOR TRANSFORMATION

For the second year, SNN will be presenting Tools for Transformation: Building Confidence and Capacity on Saturday, April 12, 2008 at Dorsey High School in Los Angeles. Last year, families traveled from as far as Fresno to the Inland Empire in order to participate in the event. Attendance is limited.

On December 6, 2007, Beverly Pegues Morgan, former Director of Children & Adult Services, celebrated the culmination of her auspicious career. One hundred and fifty of her closest family members, friends and colleagues gathered at the Carson Community Center in order to honor Ms. Morgan for three decades of service to those diagnosed with developmental disabilities.

Beverly worked in various management capacities, beginning as a part-time unit manager in 1977. As a unit manager, her staff in the In-Home Services Department implemented a specialized sub-unit that provided services to judicially involved consumers residing in the community. She also provided on-site liaison activities to those incarcerated at Sybil Brand and Men's Central Jail, and represented Los Angeles County Regional Centers on the Psychiatric Emergency Coordinating Committee (PECC) to establish an inter-agency agreement with law enforcement, mental health and health services entities in order to facilitate better community response in an effort to meet our consumers’ needs.

She rose through the ranks of SCLARC’s management to become the Director of Children and Adult Services, a position in which she had oversight over the majority of the agency’s staff. On December 4, 2007, her department honored her with a luncheon program at which she gave her parting words.

“As you know, SCLARC is the best thing that ever happened to me that I never planned for. And after such a wonderful career here at SCLARC, I know I am leaving the Department of Children & Adult Services in very capable hands. Mr. Reuben Lee is unquestionably committed to the well-being of this organization and navigates a myriad of issues as they pertain to the developmental disabilities system,” stated Ms. Morgan. “Reuben’s motto is ‘SCLARC is not just a job, but an adventure.’ It’s an adventure that he is proud to be a part of. He is supportive to staff, fosters relationships between vendors and the agency, and is

Under the Lanterman Developmental Disabilities Services Act, the “State of California accepts a responsibility for persons with developmental disabilities and an obligation to them which it must discharge.” Soon after the enactment of the Lanterman Act, the State established regional centers to carryout this responsibility. The first two regional centers were established in 1966 and they had a budget of $966,386 to serve 559 consumers. Today there are 21 regional centers in California each serving a total of more than 1,192,000 consumers. Each regional center contracts with the State Department of Developmental Services to coordinate services for individuals with developmental disabilities and their families.

A developmental disability is a condition that originates before a person reaches age 18, is expected to continue indefinitely, and constitutes a substantial impairment. There are five categories of disability: mental retardation, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, autism, and disabling conditions closely related to mental retardation or requiring treatment similar to that required by a person with mental retardation.

Currently, SCLARC serves over 9,000 consumers. In past years, the agency has averaged an annual increase of approximately 400 consumers per year. In the last two years, those numbers have changed dramatically and SCLARC has appointed a special task force to examine the reasons why its caseload growth has slowed. Also, a new outreach and education campaign is underway in order to alert our diverse communities to regional center services and resources.

SCLARC provides a variety of services which include: intake and assessment for diagnosis and eligibility determination; individualized planning and coordination of services; advocacy; family support; assurance of service quality through monitoring, auditing, technical assistance and training to its service providers; and resource development. All services provided directly by regional centers as well as services purchased by regional centers for consumers and families are provided without regard for family income.

loyal in his efforts to see that the job, whatever it is, gets done.” Mr. Lee, who has been at the agency for two decades, knows well the intricacies of service coordination and service delivery to SCLARC’s consumers and families. He says his department is the hub of the agency.

“SCLARC is a network of professionals working together towards a shared goal,” says Lee.

“Our employees represent a major value to the agency,” he continues. “As Director of DCAS, I plan to deploy managers and key case management staff to serve as liaisons to agencies with whom SCLARC shares consumers i.e. the Department of Children and Family Services, California Children Services, Mental Health, and the Department of Probation. If we partner with these agencies, we will be able to provide better case management to our dually diagnosed and/or judicially involved consumers.”

Mr. Lee’s department encompasses the hub of SCLARC’s workforce with approximately 120 service coordinators and managers under his supervision. The department provides ongoing case management services to SCLARC’s 9,000 consumers and their families. And Reuben is now responsible for conducting internal audits to ensure compliance with mandated federal and state standards. He serves as a point of contact for external federal audit officials and the review of and compliance with purchase of service standards to ensure the continuity and consistency of services. He will also represent SCLARC as a member of the Chief Counselor’s group, within legislative regulations and contractual mandates. Mr. Lee says it is vitally important that he stays abreast of current trends in the field of developmental disabilities in order to be able to interpret the impact that these trends might have on SCLARC and the community we serve.

Joining SCLARC in 1987, Reuben entered the agency as a Service Coordinator. He was promoted to Placement Specialist, Unit Manager, and Assistant Director during his 20-year tenure with SCLARC. As the Assistant Director of DCAS, Reuben assisted Ms. Morgan with the administrative and operational aspects of the department. He supervised staff, coordinated special projects, trained new staff members, provided input to the consumer services department’s ad hoc committees, attended inter/intra-departmental meetings and participated in quality assurance, funding and service compliance reviews. Reuben Lee holds a bachelor’s degree in Social Rehabilitation from Talladega College in Alabama, and a Master’s in Special Education from California State University, Los Angeles. He is the proud father of three—Reuben Jr., Adrianne and Nicole Lee. He is also a member of Omega Psi Phi, Inc., Compton Chapter. In his spare time, he enjoys playing basketball, traveling and listening to music.
